

Coney Island

by Dan Rosart

While this Brooklyn neighborhood exists in every version of New York, in one it contains not an amusement park, but a community of rabbitfolk. The rabbits don't understand the phrase, "Good fences make good neighbors," because they're always hopping over fences with presents for their neighbors. Each present may be simple—a trinket, a snack, or even just a letter—but they are welcome in time of need. And since you need to get home in time, find some neighbors, get on a first name basis with them, and maybe they'll band together for a present that can help you on your way.
